Living Out God’s Mission in the World

The policies and procedures of The United Church of Canada exist to support the church in living out God’s mission in the world. The congregational designated minister policies and procedures aim to support congregations in developing positions that meet specific needs within the larger ministry context of the congregation.

Definition

“Congregational designated minister” means a baptized lay person employed by a pastoral charge in a specified ministry position designated by the presbytery as accountable to the governing body of the pastoral charge. This category does not include persons serving as candidate supply, intern supply, student intern, or student supply.

Policy

The policies about lay ministry may be found under Pastoral Relations, Section I.1.8 of The Manual. The policy about employment of a congregational designated minister can be found in Section I.1.8.3.

Ethical Standards and Standards of Practice

Congregational designated ministers (CDMs) are employees of a pastoral charge and are accountable to the pastoral charge as stipulated in the position description. For the purposes of disciplinary oversight, congregational designated ministers are subject to the same review process that applies to ministry personnel who are directly accountable to the presbytery (see Section J.9 of The Manual).

The policy that defines the effectiveness of congregational designated ministers and ministry personnel, known as the Ethical Standards and Standards of Practice, was approved by the 38th General Council. Please familiarize yourself with these standards.

Procedure

1. Congregation Proposes CDM Position

Congregational designated ministry is community-based ministry that addresses a specific area of need within a congregation.

The congregation or its representatives, through either a Joint Needs Assessment process or a congregational assessment process, develop a position description that meets the identified needs. The Categorization Guidelines (Appendix A) and the Competencies for Congregational Designated Ministers (Appendix B) may be of assistance in this task.

The governing body then submits the position description to the presbytery Pastoral Relations Committee, using form PR 462 CA Request for Categorization (available on www.united-church.ca).

2. Presbytery Assesses Position Description

The presbytery Pastoral Relations Committee assesses the position description, referencing the Categorization Guidelines. The committee

- affirms the position as congregationally accountable (i.e., lay employee or congregational designated minister), or
- recommends that the position be a presbytery-accountable ministry position (i.e., ministry personnel)

The committee records its decision regarding position categorization on form PR 462 CA. The form is returned to the pastoral charge, with one copy to the Conference and one retained by the committee.

If the presbytery Pastoral Relations Committee categorizes the position as congregationally accountable, the congregation may proceed with a search process to fill the position.

If the Pastoral Relations Committee categorizes the position as presbytery accountable, the congregation may enter into a dialogue with the committee to determine

- whether the position description may be altered to fit within the scope of a congregational designated minister, or
- what process is needed to appoint or call ministry personnel to the pastoral charge. Filling a presbytery-accountable position either prompts a Joint Needs Assessment, if the congregation has not recently completed one, or requires the declaration of a vacancy followed by a Joint Search Process. A presbytery-accountable position may be filled by a designated lay minister.

3. Congregation Undertakes Search Process

If the search process proceeds to fill a congregational designated minister position, the search committee is responsible for ensuring that the successful applicant has, or is willing to acquire through a continuing education plan, the core competencies required of a congregational designated minister (see Appendix B).

The governing body of the pastoral charge and the search committee are responsible to identify and test for competencies specific to the needs of their community, as reflected in the position description. For reference, competencies specific to youth ministry, parish nursing, pastoral care, education, outreach, worship, and music ministry may be found in Appendix B.

4. Board Makes an Appointment

Once the search committee has made a decision about an applicant, it brings a recommendation to the governing body for a decision. The board may choose to put the decision to the congregation at a congregational meeting. The congregational designated minister must be appointed for a specified period of time, to be determined by the board. The appointment may later be renewed.

Upon appointment, the applicant whose name is before the governing body of the pastoral charge is responsible to provide an original, current vulnerable sector (level 2) police records check (dated within the last six months), of which the governing body may retain a copy. A new police records check must be provided to the governing body every sixth year as the appointment is renewed.

Terms of appointment

- In negotiating terms, all federal and provincial employment standards must be met. For reference, please see Employment Guidelines for Lay Employees and Faithful Footsteps: Screening Procedures for Positions of Trust and Authority in The United Church of Canada.
- A congregational designated minister serving 14 hours a week or more must be enrolled in the United Church Pension and Benefits Plans.
- The congregation is responsible for determining a continuing education budget and time allotment for the congregational designated minister at the time of appointment. Congregational designated ministers meet very specific needs within faith communities. Effective and dynamic leadership requires continuous education and learning. The congregational designated minister, in collaboration with the Ministry and Personnel Committee of the pastoral charge, discerns the best use of the continuing education resources in the context of the congregational appointment.

Accountability, supervision, and oversight

- Congregational designated ministers are appointed by and accountable to the governing body of the pastoral charge. A congregational designated minister may only be appointed to a pastoral charge being served by a member of the order of ministry or a designated lay minister.
- The presbytery is the primary court of discipline for a congregational designated minister. For the purpose of oversight and discipline, congregational designated ministers are treated as ministry personnel.

Appendix A: Categorization Guidelines

These are guidelines for affirming that a congregational designated ministry position, prepared by a congregation in response to specific needs identified within the community, is congregationally accountable.

Introduction

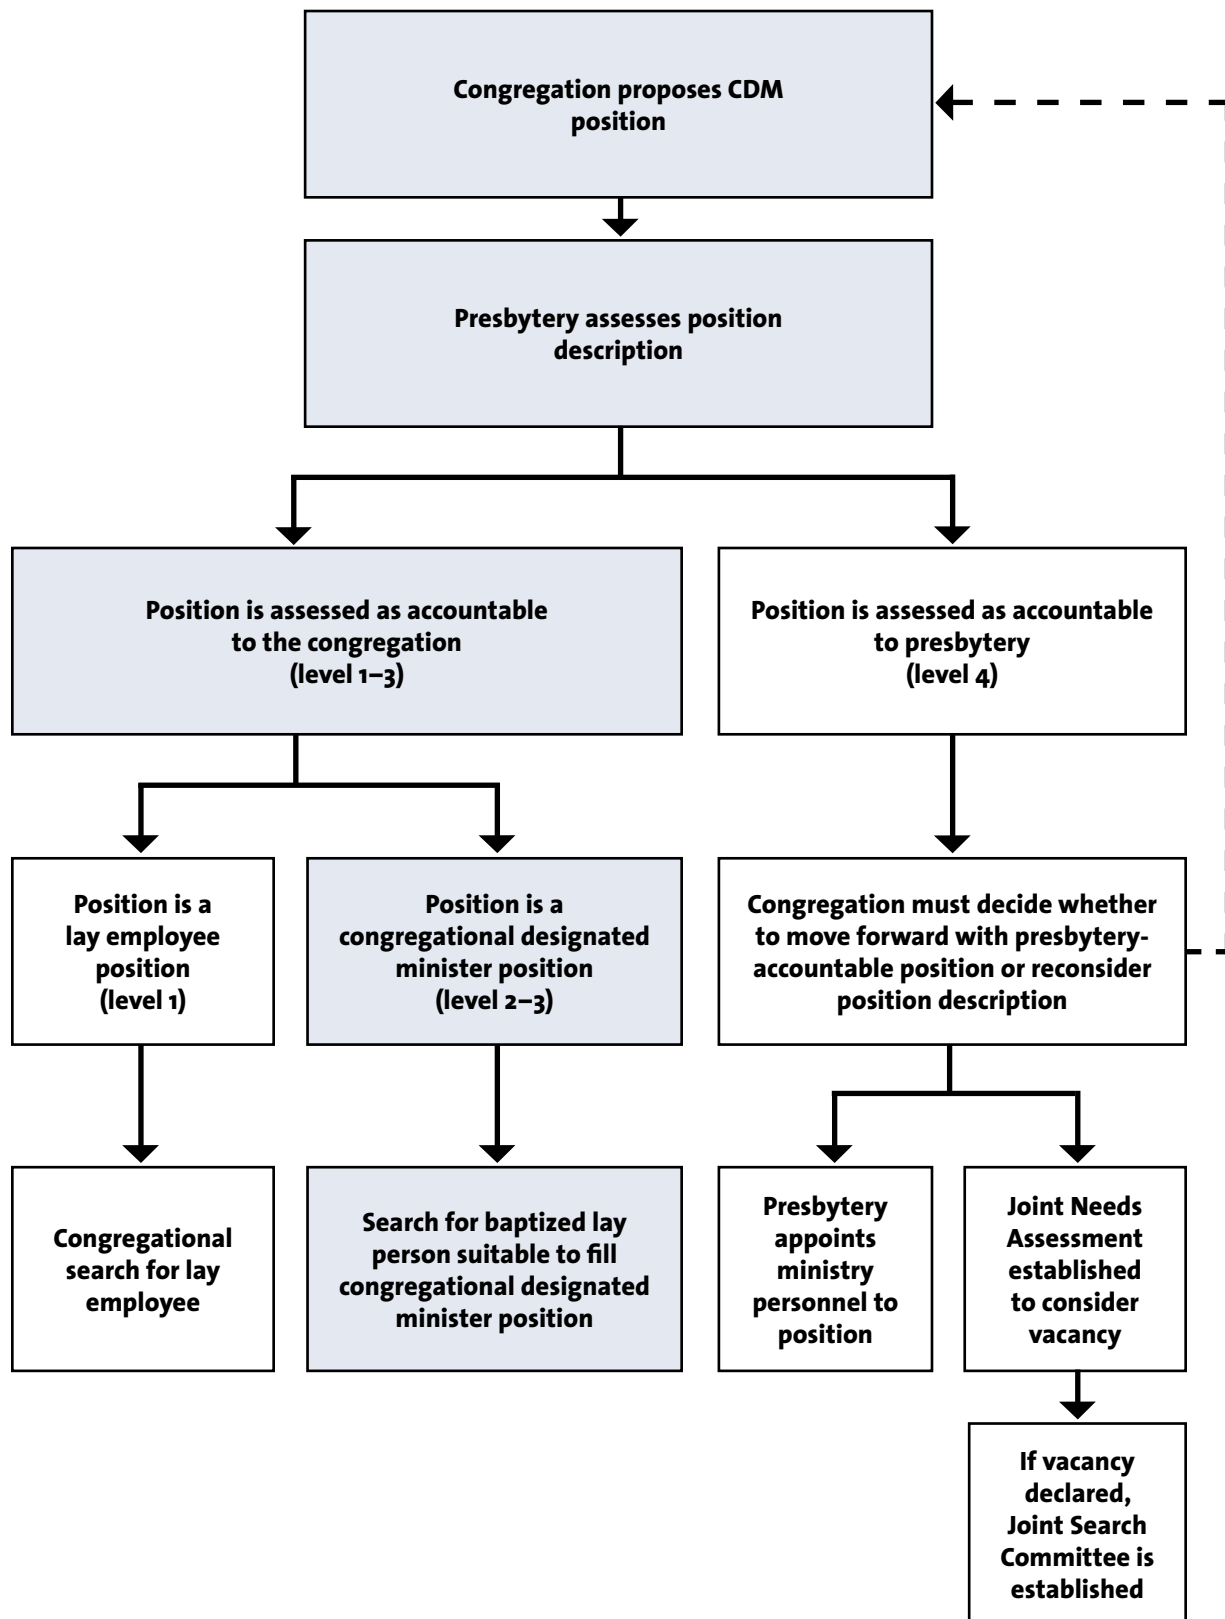

Each participant in a congregation brings gifts and skills that contribute to the congregation's well-being and to its capacity to be in mission. As the work of one and the same Spirit, each contribution counts toward equipping the saints for ministry. When a paid leadership position is involved, it is necessary, for the purposes of accountability, good order, stewardship, and justice, to make some determinations about the equitable relationship of one paid position to another in the context of mutuality in mission.

The following guidelines assist in determining whether a position is congregationally accountable or presbytery accountable. It is the role of the presbytery Pastoral Relations Committee to receive congregational designated ministry position descriptions from congregations and assess the positions to determine that they fit within the scope of a congregationally accountable appointment.

Process of Categorization by the Presbytery Pastoral Relations Committee

1. Review the proposed position description for clarity by answering the following questions:
 - What are the roles and responsibilities of the position?
 - What is the purpose of the position?
 - What skills and education are needed to accomplish the role?
2. Review the categorization definitions (p. 9) and criteria (pp. 10–13). It is possible that the level for the position can be determined simply on the basis of the definitions and the criteria. If so, complete part B on the Position Categorization Worksheet (p. 14) and part C on form PR 462 CA Request for Categorization (available on www.united-church.ca) and forward it to the presbytery/district for approval.
3. If the Detailed Rating Process is being used, read through the guiding principles in each section, determine the rating (1–4) that best fits the position, and record it on part C of the worksheet.
4. When all sections have been completed, total the points on the worksheet. The level of the position has now been determined. Positions in levels 1–3 are congregationally accountable, and positions in level 4 are presbytery accountable.
5. Record the level in Part C on the form PR 462 CA Request for Categorization and forward it to the presbytery/district for approval.

Criteria

Each position is a collection of tasks, duties, and responsibilities. It is sometimes difficult to make accurate and explicit comparisons of one complete position description to another. For this reason, the categorization process outlined below determines the weight of each position's contribution to the ministry of the congregation according to four criteria found in all positions.

- Breadth and Depth of Experience/Knowledge Required: every kind of knowledge and skill needed for acceptable performance
- Accountability and Decision-Making: the accountability for actions and their consequences, freedom to act, how and where decisions are made
- Complexity of Focus: the number of programs and areas of congregational life involved, problem solving, dealing with ambiguity and long-range considerations, analytical thinking, the ability to evaluate, create, and reason
- Boundaries on Involvement: impact of actions and sphere of influence/representation

Detailed Rating Process

Section I: Breadth and depth of experience/knowledge required

This criterion measures every kind of knowledge and skill needed for acceptable performance, e.g., specialized knowledge and skills, coordinating and integrating skills, and human relations skills.

Rating	Guiding Principles
1	Basic knowledge of job fundamentals in a position that is very specific with regard to its purpose, who is being served, and how the work will be performed. The position requires experience in applying procedures that generally are well defined and straightforward, with occasional discretion required. Human relations skills: interactions are within a well-defined group, and maintaining courteous, healthy working relationships within the group is important; does not involve facilitating the leadership of others.
2	Experience in and knowledge of one particular area of the congregation's ministry/mission, such as youth group leadership, church school coordination, or pastoral visiting, with the ability to apply a similar program in a different context. Human relations skills: the ability to listen; the ability to interact appropriately with individuals and groups/committees connected to or interested in the activities undertaken; appropriate awareness of related activities in the congregation. Accomplished in planning and implementing activities and/or practical procedures that are moderately complex.

3	Knowledge and experience for oversight, planning, and implementing a key program of the congregation, such as Christian education for all ages, a youth program, or a community outreach program. Skills in several activities with basic understanding of underlying theology, theory, and principles. Human relations skills: the ability to function pastorally; the ability to interpret the program and to facilitate the involvement of others in leading, supporting, and developing the program. Ability to give leadership in a congregational program/process that involves varied activities and has an impact on other aspects of the congregation's ministry and mission.
4	Knowledge and experience needed for oversight of a major program (or several key programs) that incorporates most dimensions of congregational life (worship, pastoral care, education, outreach). Well-grounded in theology, biblical knowledge, theories, principles, and the complex techniques/activities involved in congregational leadership. Human relations skills: insight into how individuals are motivated; understanding of how to encourage growth in discipleship in order to fulfill the congregation's ministry; ability to deal constructively with conflict. Ability to plan, guide, and assess a major congregational program/process that has substantial functional diversity and requires involvement with the congregation's overall ministry and mission goals.

Section II: Accountability and decision-making

This criterion covers freedom to act, accountability for actions and their consequences, and where and how decisions are made.

Rating	Guiding Principles
1	Position has well-defined procedures related to an activity within one area of the congregation's ministry (e.g., coordinating the church nursery, leading a small group on a weekly basis), and is overseen by an individual or small committee. Ability to make decisions is determined by established procedures and by supervisor/ liaison person or coordinating group.
2	Position has relatively well defined procedures, but latitude is given to deal with some ambiguous situations. Oversight of this position is provided by appropriate congregational committee(s). Most decisions about activities and procedures are made in consultation with ministry personnel, a congregational leader, and/or committee(s) within the pastoral charge. Decisions made without consultation are subject to precedents and well-defined policy. Accountability resides at the committee level.

3	Position responsibilities are defined within the broader context of the congregation's ministry and mission and may be changed, depending upon circumstances. Ability to deal with ambiguous situations will be part of this position, and there is considerable scope for freedom of action. Works closely with one or more committees to produce desired outcomes in one or more areas of congregational life. May work jointly with other ministry staff for coordination purposes. This position is accountable at the committee level (e.g., Christian Education Committee, Health Ministries Committee), but some decisions about this work may be made by the governing body of the pastoral charge and require the involvement of the incumbent.
4	Position is very broadly defined and dealing with ambiguity will be a large part of this position. Accountability is at the governing body level as well as with presbytery. Input about decisions and actions is required from various congregational committees, congregational leaders, and presbytery. Freedom to act, within the boundaries of ministry personnel, will rest with the incumbent. The incumbent for this position will act in a congregational capacity very similar to that of an order of ministry person. The position has responsibilities involving significant activities and resources of the congregation and is the sole paid position accountable for the outcomes of the work involved.

Section III: Complexity of focus

This criterion covers problem solving, dealing with ambiguity, difficulty of the thinking required, and the number of programs and areas of congregational life involved.

Rating	Guiding Principles
1	Situation is consistent and problems are resolved by making decisions on fairly common issues, by simple choice among known options, with very little need to consider alternative ways of approach. Thinking within well-defined, somewhat diversified procedures; many precedents covering most situations and/or readily available assistance.
2	The situation has some variation requiring the search for solutions within an area of learned approaches. Having experience in dealing with similar situations will be very helpful. There is a need to deal with some degree of ambiguity, and life/work experience will come into play in thinking through situations. Precedents cover many but not all situations and there is access to assistance.

3	Situations are quite different, requiring a search for solutions mainly within the area of learned approaches. Some theological, analytical, and constructive thinking is required. Decisions take into account congregational policy, where what is stated, but not how. Thinking about one or more areas of the congregation's ministry within a frame of reference related to the congregation's overall mission, with considerable scope for making choices about how to carry out responsibilities.
4	Situations are varied, requiring analytical, interpretive, evaluative, and/or constructive thinking skills. Ability is needed to access biblical and theological perspectives, to develop new concepts, and to help people comprehend the larger picture. Thinking within concepts, principles, and broad guidelines related to the church's ministry and mission goals and objectives; many intangibles or unstructured aspects to the context.

Section IV: Boundaries of involvement

This criterion measures impact of action, representative authority, and sphere of influence.

Rating	Guiding Principles
1	Work is done with a specific supervisory person and/or with a small group. Influence is limited to one specific activity within the congregation.
2	Work is done with one or more committees of the pastoral charge, and the position is understood as having authority in regard to a specific area of the congregation's ministry, such as pastoral visiting or coordination of the church school. Impact of actions taken is limited to one area of congregational life.
3	Work is done with congregational leaders, committees of the pastoral charge, and possibly with the governing body of the pastoral charge. The position may have authority to represent the congregation in certain circumstances. Impact of decision-making is broader and may affect more than one aspect of congregational life.
4	Work is done with congregational leaders, committees of the pastoral charge, and possibly with the governing body of the pastoral charge. The position may have authority to represent the congregation in certain circumstances. Impact of decision-making is broader and may affect more than one aspect of congregational life.
